108TH CONGRESS
1ST SESSION

H. CON. RES. _____

Expressing the concern of the Congress regarding the detrimental impact on the United States economy of the manipulation by foreign governments of their currencies.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. MANZULLO (for himself, Mr. STENHOLM, Mr. ROGERS of Michigan, and Mr. HILL) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on _____

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

Expressing the concern of the Congress regarding the detrimental impact on the United States economy of the manipulation by foreign governments of their currencies.

Whereas manufacturing is critical to the health of the United States economy, generating high quality products, personal opportunity, careers, wealth, high standards of living, and economic growth that together enable the American Dream;

Whereas the manufacturing sector faces the most intense global competition in United States history, making it impossible for many firms to operate profitably and earn a return on capital invested, even as manufacturing costs continue to increase for many reasons, including governmental actions;

Whereas in July 2000 the manufacturing sector slipped into recession and since has lost 2,700,000 high paying manufacturing jobs, while the rest of the economy has actually added 623,000 jobs;

Whereas industrial trade experts estimate that at least half of these manufacturing job losses have been due to adverse trade movements, principally due to the effects of an overvalued United States dollar;

Whereas exports of United States manufactured goods have fallen by $100,000,000,000 from their peak in 2000, and account for up to 40 percent of the total decline in production and jobs;

Whereas manufacturing remains the most trade sensitive sector of the United States economy, with one sixth of all United States manufacturing jobs, and almost one quarter in durable goods production, attributable to exported products;

Whereas the primary objective of the international monetary system should be to facilitate international trade and investment by helping to ensure that exchange rates realistically reflect the relative level of prices and costs in different countries, and that they be flexible enough to respond to changes, over time, in such relationships;

Whereas currency manipulation by the People's Republic of China, Japan, South Korea, and Taiwan, the major

Asian trading partners of the United States, has contributed significantly to the loss of United States manufacturing jobs since July 2000;

Whereas these 4 countries hold, in the aggregate, $1,210,000,000,000 of currency reserves, half of which have been bought since 1999;

Whereas currency manipulation effectively subsidizes all exports to the United States, and places additional de facto tariffs on all imports of goods and services from the United States;

Whereas in its 2003 annual report, the globally respected Bank of International Settlements criticized those currency practices of Asian countries that seek to maintain large trade surpluses;

Whereas the International Monetary Fund has also criticized the buildup of Asian currency reserves as destabilizing and advocated a floating exchange rate for the People's Republic of China;

Whereas for decades the International Monetary Fund and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade have proscribed trade-distorting currency manipulation;

Whereas Article IV, Section 1(iii) of the Articles of Agreement of the International Monetary Fund cautions members to "avoid manipulating exchange rates . . . in order . . . to gain an unfair competitive advantage over other members", and a related provision defines manipulation to include "protracted large-scale intervention in one direction in the exchange market";

Whereas Article XV of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade 1994 (as defined in section 2 of the Uruguay Round Agreements Act), which is binding on members of the World Trade Organization, states that members “shall not by exchange rate action frustrate the intent of the provisions of this Agreement”, and the objective of that Agreement, as stated in broad terms in its preamble, is “entering into reciprocal and mutually advantageous arrangements directed to the substantial reduction of tariffs and other barriers to trade and to the elimination of discriminatory treatment in international commerce”;

Whereas China has been manipulating the value of its currency by pegging its exchange rate to the United States dollar;

Whereas China has refused to make any changes to its currency peg;

Whereas United States manufacturers doing business in China continue to face other market barriers and unfair trade practices, including high tariffs, subsidies, technical trade restrictions, counterfeiting, tied trade, violations of intellectual property rights, and nonmarket-based industrial policies that limit United States exports and increase import competition;

Whereas the International Monetary Fund has advised China to adopt a more flexible exchange rate policy, and has judged that such a change would not have serious adverse consequences for that country;

Whereas China’s current dollar accumulations now exceed $350,000,000,000 and are growing at the rate of $120,000,000,000 each year—an amount that approximates China’s trade surplus with the United States;

Whereas China is engaged in massive currency intervention, through huge purchases of United States dollars, to keep the yuan from appreciating, despite large trade surpluses and investment inflows;

Whereas this intervention has maintained the Chinese yuan at its artificially low 1994 value—which by some estimates is 40 percent below its market value; and

Whereas the magnitude of the distorting effects are clear: unless addressed immediately, China's currency manipulation and unfair trading practices could further weaken the manufacturing sector in the United States and spawn (1) massive United States trade deficits, and (2) calls for protectionism, which would undermine the global economy: Now, therefore, be it

1 Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate
2 concurring), That—

3 (1) the Congress declares that manufacturing is
4 an industry critical to the future well-being and na-
5 tional security of the United States and, therefore,
6 the United States Government should make greater
7 efforts to promote innovation, reduce manufacturing
8 costs, and level the international playing field for 9 this sector;

10 (2) the Congress believes that the clear inten-
11 tion of the manipulation by Asian countries of their
12 currencies is to increase exports and restrict im-
13 ports, that is, to introduce an artificial element that 14 assures that there will not be a level playing field for 15 international trade;

1 (3) the Congress further believes that the ma-
2 nipulation by the People's Republic of China of its
3 currency violates Article XV (4) of the General
4 Agreement on Tariffs and Trade 1994 (as defined in 5 section 2 of the Uruguay Round Agreements Act),
6 and is unjustifiable and unreasonable, and burdens
7 and restricts United States commerce, under section
8 301 of the Trade Act of 1974;

9 (4) in order to help achieve greater equity in
10 competitive conditions and international trade prac-
11 tices, the Congress calls on the President—

12 (A) to vigorously enforce United States
13 laws that provide remedies to counteract the 14 unfair foreign practice of currency manipula-
15 tion; and

16 (B) to encourage the harmonization of an
17 international exchange rate policy of freely
18 floating exchange rates based on market forces,
19 where government currency intervention is kept
20 to a minimum;

21 (5) the executive branch should take steps that
22 enable the dollar and other major currencies to move
23 toward their equilibrium rates by correcting market
24 imperfections, countering foreign currency manipula-

1 tion, and seeking cooperation among major countries
2 in taking appropriate coordinated actions;

3 (6) the Congress commends the recent actions
4 and statements by the President and the Secretary
5 of the Treasury that have delivered a strong mes-
6 sage from the United States Government that the 7 United States expects its trading partners to treat
8 the people, producers, workers, farmers, and manu-
9 facturers of the United States fairly;

10 (7) the Congress believes that—

11 (A) the currency of a country should be 12 controlled by the market and should reflect the 13 true values of the economy of that country; and

14 (B) the management of currencies at un-
15 natural rates distorts markets and encourages
16 protectionism;

17 (8) the Congress has directed the General Ac-
18 counting Office to undertake an ongoing review of 19 currency manipulation practices worldwide and their
20 impact on the agriculture and manufacturing sectors
21 in the United States;

22 (9) the Secretary of the Treasury should ensure 23 that each semiannual report due to the Congress on 24 international economic and exchange rate policies

1 addresses the full range of currency manipulation
2 practices of foreign governments;

3 (10) the Congress strongly urges the United
4 States Trade Representative to take action under
5 section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974 to combat un-
6 fair currency manipulation practices in order to pro-
7 tect United States commerce and to gain access to
8 foreign markets for United States goods and serv-
9 ices, should negotiations fail to produce meaningful
10 results; and

11 (11) the Congress encourages the President to 12 review all other tools to level the playing field with 13 respect to currency manipulation.
